Arguably, it has become something of a rare delight to find a restaurant that says au revoir! to the cookie-cutter chain restaurant, and takes pride in having truly unique quirks, without any hint of pretence or exclusivity. Hats off then to Kendell's Bistro for managing to strike the perfect balance, despite being a relative newcomer to the Leeds restaurant scene; so what's their secret?

The Bistro brings beaucoup de Parisian glamour to West Yorkshire, and with dishes concocted by a chef trained in Paris, but born in Halifax, the food is authentically French yet down-to-earth and accessible to the stoically British among us – it's not just escargots! The steak served with duck fat potatoes and a sauce béarnaise comes highly recommended, and there's also vegan and vegetarian dishes, although it would surely be blasphemous not to wash your meal down with a pick of the Bistro's extensive wine list... French of course.

This art deco-styled restaurant is timelessly chic - just like the French capital – and equally inviting to groups of friends, parties, children as well as couples. Very reasonable priced dishes means a meal will cost you much less than a trip to France; be sure to take advantage of the Bistro's pre-theatre offers: £12.95 for two courses; £14.95 for three, or for £19.95 you can enjoy half a bottle of wine too. Be sure to look out for their Bastille Day celebrations on July 16th too. C'est Bon!
